NUMBER OF REPORT

CENSUS OF AMERICAN BUSINESS, 1933

A separate report should be prepared for every retail or wholesale place of business, every service business, hotel, theater, or other place of amusement. Combined reports for two or more establishments, even though under the same management or ownership, cannot be accepted except on special instructions from Washington. All reports should cover, if possible, the full year's operations for 1933, even if ownership has changed during the year. If the fiscal year ends within a month before December 31 the fiscal year can be reported. Otherwise report the business of the 12 months of the calendar year 1933. Units of chains which must be reported from the home office should fill out this form as far as possible; at least blocks 1, 2, and 3. (The balance of the information will be obtained by Washington from the chain's home office.) Only sworn employees of the Bureau of the Census will be permitted to examine your report, and no information will be given out by the Bureau of the Census which would disclose, exactly or approximately, any of the figures in your report; provided that identifying data may be used to compile a central card file of business establishments in the United States for Government statistical purposes.

This is the fourth of the series of final reports on retail trade presenting the results of the 1933 Census of American Business. The statistics were collected in 1934 by a field canvass of retail stores in every State, city and county in the United States, with funds provided by the Federal Civil Works Administration. They cover the operations of retailers during the year 1933.

The reports are prepared under the supervision of Fred A. Gosnell, Chief Statistician for the Census of American Business, by John Guernsey, in charge of Retail Distribution. Assistance in the preparation of statistical data was rendered by William A. Ruff, Assistant Chief Statistician, and James O. Reid, Retail Assistant.

INTRODUCTION

This report of the Retail Census, which is a part of the Census of American Business, presents an analysis of disappearances and accessions of retail stores during the four-year period of 1930 to 1933, inclusive. It is a study of stores which have been eliminated from the marketing structure and those which were added to it during the period under consideration. Special emphasis has been given to new stores which started operations subsequent to 1929, indicating their major characteristics as compared with those of the older establishments.

What is a Retail Store?

For census purposes a retail store is a place of business, the primary function of which is to distribute goods in a retail manner, that is, to sell in fairly small quantities to the consumer. It may be in the form of a store or a filling station, restaurant, garage, mail-order house or district office of a crew of house-to-house salesmen. It may be the retail department of a utility company, or a leased department in a store of another kind. No merchandising establishment has been classified as "retail", unless fifty percent or more of its sales were made in a retail manner; the wholesale census includes the total sales of those wholesaler-retailers whose business is more than fifty percent wholesale.

The Retail Census was taken on the basis of stores rather than companies or firms in order to facilitate the canvass and to make it possible to present data by geographic areas. A separate report was required for each place of business regardless of whether or not it was owned or operated as part of a larger business organization. Itinerant vendors and others who maintain no regularly established places of business were not included in this census, and it is probable that many small retailers who operate only in the summer were not canvassed.

Basis for this Analysis

Among the questions provided on the schedule 1/ used in collecting the data for this census was the inquiry: "Was this establishment in operation in 1929? (Yes or No)....." This schedule also required that the official of the company signing the report certify to the accuracy of the information and indicate whether the report covered the entire year of 1933 or a specified part thereof during which the store was in operation.

Only those stores are classified as new stores in this analysis which reported that they were not in operation in 1929. If the person furnishing the information indicated that the store was not in operation in 1929 and the certificate part of the schedule showed that the information covered the full year of 1933, the establishment was classified as one which started operations subsequent to 1929 but prior to 1933. Stores which started operations some time during the year 1933 were classified on the basis of the information contained in the certificate. If the certificate indicated that the business was in existence only part of the year, the information was checked with the monthly employment data shown in the schedule to make sure that the two items coincided. It should be noted, however, that this report includes only those stores which were operating at the close of 1933. No data are available for concerns which come into existence subsequent to 1929 but which ceased operations prior to the time the canvass was made early in 1934.

Plan of Presentation

In order that the data presented in this study may be properly analyzed and correlated, statistics showing disappearances over the four-year period from the end of 1929 to the end of 1933 are given first. New stores are then analyzed by data on which they started operations, by kinds of business, and by States.

The classification by kinds of business is governed by the principal line or lines of merchandise sold and the popular designation of the stores. The same group classifications were used as in the 1929 Retail Census. In addition, separate data are shown for beer-liquor stores and drinking places. These latter two kinds of business are new and grew rapidly during 1933. Beer and wine were legalized for sale in many States in April, 1933, and liquor in December, 1933; hence the sales reflect but a part of a year's business.

Limitations of the Material

This study is based entirely upon the material gathered in two censuses, the Census of Distribution covering the year 1929 and the Census of American Business for the year 1933. Obviously, the accuracy of the results is dependent, first, upon the thoroughness and completeness of the two canvasses and, second, upon their comparability.

Every effort has been made to have the classification between wholesale and retail and the classifications by kinds of business identical for both years. Nevertheless, due to lack of commodity sales information for 1933, the classification by kinds of business may not have been as exact as for 1929; thus causing somewhat of a shift in classifications. Moreover, a certain latitude must be allowed for variations between kind-of-business classifications which may have been caused by lack of uniform terminology throughout the country. It is likewise possible that the two censuses are not exactly alike from the standpoint of coverage and thoroughness of canvass. In some sections of the country the canvass might have been more complete during one of those censuses than in the other. There may have been some difference of opinion among the respondents as to what constitutes a new business.

Despite these limitations, it is believed that the data are probably as complete, comparable, and reliable as any data secured on such a large scale can be. Furthermore, attendant deficiencies tend to be minimized when data are presented for the United States as a whole or for any major kind-of-business group.

Disappearance and Changes in Ownership Since 1929

There are few reliable data on the subject of disappearance of retail stores and the appearance of others to take their place. Even the data on business failures are not classified in such a way that they lend themselves to a study of this nature.

Further, in the retail field the disappearance of a store of a given name does not necessarily indicate its complete elimination from the business structure. The owner may have sold his business at a satisfactory price; he may have taken in a partner with a change in the name over the door; or he may have incorporated the business or so changed its character that it disappears from one classification and appears in another. Until it is possible to trace individual ownerships step by step from year to year, and determine exactly the nature of any changes in status, it is impossible to distinguish between complete elimination and incidental changes in name or classification.

Another phase of this subject is disappearance in its effect on the individual owner and on the public as customers. If a store of a given kind continues in business at the same location and without material change in the character of its service, the public is not particularly concerned; it need not be aware of changes in ownership.

Likewise, it is recognized that so-called new stores also should be traced back to their antecedents, including knowledge of the nature of the business or employment in which the proprietor was engaged prior to the establishment of the new store. These data are lacking. What is given here should not be construed as mortality.

Table 1A shows for each of 52 kinds of business the number of stores in 1929, which are not accounted for as still in operation in 1933. It must be emphasized that errors in reporting, lack of information, changes in ownership and even the failure to canvass every store in 1933 included in the 1929 Census are reflected as "disappearances" in this comparison, regardless of whether the changes are considered by kinds-of-business groups or for retail trade as a whole.

Loss in Number of Stores

For presentation of data in Table 1A, the loss in the number of stores between 1929 and 1934 has been calculated for each kind-of-business classification. Of the 559,854 stores which apparently have disappeared or changed hands during the four-year period under consideration, nearly 31 percent are accounted for by food stores, followed by the automotive group, the apparel group and the restaurant group in the order named. The general merchandise group shows the smallest loss in actual numbers.

Losses in absolute numbers are not as significant, however, as relative losses. Cigar stores and stands show the largest decline in relation to the number enumerated in 1929, followed by the apparel group and the furniture and household group; the latter group showed also one of the largest percentage declines in sales since 1929. Although filling stations actually increased in number between 1929 and 1933, more than 27 percent of those in operation in 1929 either changed hands or went out of business before the end of 1933.

In 1929 the Census of Distribution obtained reports for 1,537,720 retail stores, in addition to 5,438 automobile service establishments now included in the Service Census. Of this number, 559,854 were not in existence when the census for 1933 was taken. This represents a minimum loss in establishments, based on 1929 figures, of 36.4 percent. Inasmuch as a period of four years is involved, the average minimum loss was 9.1 percent per annum. This would give, beginning January 1, 1934, an average maximum expectancy of life per retail store of eleven years. Inasmuch, however, as the conditions prevailing during the four-year period, 1930-1933 inclusive, were not normal and there is no way of determining accurately the number of stores which have come and gone during that period, nor the number of shifts as between classifications, this method of calculating the average life expectancy is somewhat hazardous. Nevertheless, the results are significant when compared with estimates heretofore made on the basis of fragmentary data.

Disappearance and Changes, by Kinds of Business

The 559,854 stores which disappeared or lost their identity by change of ownership since 1929, representing 36.4 percent of all stores in operation in 1929, include probably a very large proportion of small stores with limited capital and insufficient credit to carry them over periods of adverse conditions. No data are available to show disappearances analyzed by size of business, but the general conclusion stated above is based on indirect evidence - an analysis of the distribution of disappearances by kind-of-business groups.

Nearly 31 percent of the total number of stores disappearing or losing their identity by change of ownership are in the food group and most of these are candy and confectionery stores, delicatessen stores, fruit stores, and small grocery stores. Candy stores, requiring a minimum of working capital, show a disappearance ratio in four years of 48 percent, or an average of 12 percent per year. Delicatessen stores show approximately the same ratio of disappearance and fruit stores an even higher one. Grocery stores show a disappearance ratio in four years of nearly 35 percent or at the rate of 8.7 percent per year. This ratio is not nearly as high as it might appear for it includes shifts from one classification to another, as when a grocery store adds fresh meat and becomes a combination store, or a meat market adds groceries. Moreover, it must be remembered that in the entire United States there were in 1929 less than 10,000 grocery, combination and meat stores with sales volume exceeding $100,000, and only 45,754 with sales volume exceeding $50,000.

The next largest group of disappearances in point of numbers is the automotive group, which accounts for 14 percent of the total. More than 23,000 motor-vehicle dealers, or slightly more than 50 percent of all such dealers in business in 1929, seem to have disappeared or lost their identity in the four-year interval. On the other hand, although 33,470 filling stations disappeared they constituted only 27.5 percent of those in operation in 1929 -- a ratio of less than 7 percent per year. Bicycle and motorcycle dealers show even less of a disappearance ratio and garages, which do not face to the same extent the need to replace depleted stocks of merchandise from the proceeds of their sales, came through the four years of depression with a disappearance ratio of less than 15 percent, or 3.7 percent per year.

The group hardest hit was the apparel group with a total disappearance of 50 percent of all apparel stores in operation in 1929. The ratio of disappearance was near or in excess of 50 percent for men's stores, family clothing stores, women's apparel stores, fur shops, millinery stores, custom tailors and accessory stores. Shoe stores alone show a smaller ratio aggregating 45 percent for the four years or at the rate of 11.2 percent per year.

The next hardest hit, as a group, was the furniture and household group, of which 45.6 percent of all stores in operation in 1929 had disappeared or lost their identity by the end of 1933. The disappearance ratio for furniture stores was 43.1 percent, or nearly 11 percent per year; for floor coverings, drapery and upholstery stores it averaged 12.2 percent per year, and for other home wares and appliance stores nearly 11 percent. Household appliance dealers came through with relatively little loss in numbers, averaging only 4 percent per year, whereas radio stores' disappearance ratio was four times that of household appliance dealers. It should be noted that many of the household appliance stores shown in the Census are operated by utility companies and less subject to the usual vicissitudes of business than are independent retailers.

Illustrating again the point that small stores with limited investment in stock and fixtures show the heaviest ratio of disappearance, it should be noted that electric shops show a ratio of 12.2 percent per year; cigar stores and cigar stands disappear at the rate of 14.7 percent per year, florists at the rate of nearly 11 percent per year and news dealers at the rate of 13.4 percent per year.

The department store, which must exceed $100,000 in annual sales to achieve this classification in the Census, is a good example of a business which enjoys the advantage both of greater working capital and greater variety of merchandise appeal than most other kinds of business. Even though 1,769 of the 4,190 department stores shown in the 1929 Census were doing a business that year of less than $200,000, and a majority of them undoubtedly fell below $100,000 in 1933 and, therefore, do not appear as department stores in the current Census, the number of disappearances in the four years by reason of this fact and loss of identity by reason of change in ownership aggregated only 1,018 stores, or at the rate of 6 percent per year for the four-year period. It is probable, in view of the facts stated, that the number of department stores which actually disappeared (as distinguished from those moving into the general merchandise classification because they fell below $100,000) was very small, both in number and in ratio.

The nearest approach to the department store record of stability is to be found in coal and wood yards with an annual disappearance ratio of 3.4 percent, drug stores with an annual disappearance ratio of 5.3 percent and hardware stores with an annual disappearance ratio of 5.8 percent. It is interesting to note that second-hand stores also show a low disappearance ratio—6.9 percent.

Stability by States

Table 6B shows by States and geographic divisions the number of stores and their sales analyzed in accordance with the date of establishment of the business.

In comparison with an average for the United States of 63.6 percent of stores in 1929 which continued in operation in 1933, doing 79.6 percent of the total business of all stores in 1933, the West-North-Central division averages 72.6 percent of stores and 82.5 percent of 1933 sales for "old" stores and the Mountain division averages 67.3 percent of stores and 82.9 percent of sales.

The comparison by geographic divisions follows:

STORES IN OPERATION IN 1929 (AND 1933), AND SALES

Retail Survival and Growth by States

Table 1B presents a summary by States of the data contained in Table 1A. Since it necessarily cannot make allowance for variations in the proportionate increase or disappearance of stores in various kinds of business, it should be studied with full regard for the detail shown in Tables 6 by States, particularly as to beer-liquor stores and drinking places which vary greatly between States.

STORES NEW SINCE 1929

At the close of 1933, there were in the United States 1,526,119 retail stores, which reported a volume of business during the year of $25,037,225,000. Of these 548,253 or 35.9 percent had come into existence since 1929, the year for which the first Retail Census was taken. These 548,253 new stores reported a volume of business of $5,094,302,000 or 20.4 percent of all retail sales during 1933. They were conducted by 582,802 proprietors and further provided 6,667,248 man-months of full-time employment for which $534,192,000 was paid in salaries and wages, exclusive of any return or compensation for the services of proprietors.

New Stores by Date of Operation

The 548,253 stores which came into existence since 1929 have been classified according to the period in which they began operations, as shown in Table 2 below. More than 352,000 or 64.2 percent were established in the three-year period prior to 1933, an annual average for that period of 117,340 as against 196,232 new stores in the year 1933. The average number of stores which began operations was 28,535 per quarter during the period from January 1, 1930 to March 31, 1933, inclusive, while for the last 9 months of 1933 the average of new stores rose to 59,100 per quarter, more than twice the previous average. Obviously, the figures for the period preceding April, 1933, are somewhat understated, since a number of new stores which began operations during that time were probably no longer in existence when the 1933 Census was taken. Nevertheless, the comparison is indicative of the renewal of courage which marked the second quarter and preceded a sharp rise in retail sales during and subsequent to the third quarter of 1933.

In addition to stores and sales, the above table shows the number of proprietors, full-time employees, (expressed in man-months of employment), amount of payroll and total reported expense of stores which have come into existence since 1929.

The number of proprietors exceeds slightly, for each period, the number of new stores but it is noticeable that the number of stores with two or more proprietors is appreciably greater during the second, third and fourth quarters of 1933 than it was during the three years of 1930-1932, inclusive.

The ratio of proprietors to stores for the three years and three months preceding April 1, 1933 was 1.03 proprietors per store. During the last three-quarters of 1933 the ratio increased to more than 1.13 proprietors per store. The facts suggest one or both of two probable causes. Either the stores opening in the three years immediately after 1929 and during the first quarter of 1933 were more largely corporations and units of chains, or fewer entrepreneurs were able to interest partners in the perilous task of getting into business during this period.

Employment in New Stores

Full-time employment in this table is expressed in terms of man-months or the equivalent of one month's work for the number shown. For those stores operating throughout 1933 this figure may be divided by twelve to arrive at the average number of the full-time employees in such stores, but in those stores which began operations subsequent to January 1, 1933 the average number of full-time employees would be the number of man-months divided by the number of months in operation. This average will be higher than the average shown in the other Census report, which is computed as one-twelfth of the total number of man-months, regardless of date of establishment of the business.

The amount of payroll shown in Table 2 is the amount which the newly established stores paid their employees during 1933. Of the more than $500,000,000, it should be noted that about one-fifth is attributable to the new stores which began operations during the year of 1933.

Expenses in New Stores

Total reported expense, as shown in Table 2, includes payroll, rent, supplies, taxes, insurance and all other operating expenses of the business as reported, but it does not include compensation for the services or a return on the investment of the proprietors. Of course it does not include the cost of merchandise, which is not regarded an operating expense.

There is no measure of any difference that may exist in operating expense as between stores in operation prior to the four-year period and those established during such period. It is not possible to draw any sound comparisons from the limited data available, particularly when no accounting can be made for proprietors' compensation and it is not at all certain that those businesses established in 1933 were reported with enough accuracy to include a proper accounting of deferred charges and expenses incurred, but not paid during the portion of the year in which the store was operated.

New Stores by Kinds of Business

Table 4 presents an analysis of new stores and their sales by kinds of business. It shows ratio of new stores to total stores in 1933, the period in which they were opened and the aggregate amount of sales of new stores. It also shows the percent ratio which the sales of new stores bore to the sales of all stores in operation in 1933.

New Stores by States

Table 5 presents the same data as Table 4 except that they are analyzed by States and geographic divisions. In addition it shows the number of proprietors, extent of full-time employment provided (in terms of man-months or the equivalent of one employee for the number of man-months shown), amount of payroll and the total reported expense, except proprietors' compensation.

Stability of Retailers

An attempt has been made to measure quantitatively the relative stability of the different kinds of retail business, both during the four-year period under consideration and on an annual basis. Table 3 shows the rate at which retail stores disappeared during the four years, expressed as a percent of the number in existence in 1929. It also shows the extent to which new stores came into being during the same period of time, expressed as a percent of the number of retail stores in existence in 1933. The geometric mean of these two ratios of so-called mortality on the one hand and natality on the other has been computed for forty-six kinds of business to show the "turnover" in ownership or conversely relative stability.

XI

On the basis of data in Table 3 it may be stated that the turnover for all retailers in the United States during the four-year period was about 36 percent or a yearly average of 9 percent. The rates shown in the table vary from a turnover ratio in the case of bakeries and caterers of 3.1 percent, dairy product stores (including milk dealers) of 3.7 percent and department stores of 3.8 percent per year, to as high as 13.1 percent for millinery stores, 12.8 percent for fruit stores, 11.9 percent for radio stores, the same for women's accessory stores, and around 11 percent for candy and confectionery stores, delicatessen stores, automobile accessory stores, floor coverings, drapery and upholstery stores, and cigar stores.

Although the average ratio of annual turnover in ownership for all retail stores is 9 percent, 24 of the 46 classifications show a ratio under 9 percent, one is exactly 9 percent and 21 are above the average. A summary follows:

Description of Tables

Included in this report in addition to Tables 1 to 5 described in the preceding text are the following summaries and State tables:

Table 6A is a summary for the United States showing the stores in operation in 1933, by date of their establishment, analyzed by kinds of business. The data are limited to stores and sales and the percentage which each period bears to the total of all stores in operation in 1933.

Table 6B is a summary of the same information analyzed by States and geographic divisions. It combines in one series of totals for each State all of the stores enumerated in the 1933 Census, regardless of kinds of business.

Table 6C is a summary for the United States of proprietors, full-time employees, payroll and reported expense of all retail stores, in each State, showing the same yearly and seasonal analysis that is shown for stores and sales in Table 6B.

State tables 6, similar in form to Table 6A, show for each State an analysis of stores and sales by kinds of business, classified by years and seasons in the same manner as in the U. S. Summary described above. There are 49 such tables in this volume, one for each State and one for the District of Columbia. In total they aggregate the figures contained in the U. S. Summary, Table 6A.
